RE: E.A. Sween Product Recall

E.A. Sween has announced the recall of multiple products produced between February 21 and September 12, 2019 due to possible contamination of Listeria monocytogenes, an organism that poses a serious health risk to young children, elderly people and others with weakened immune systems.

The contamination was discovered at an ingredient supplier. No products produced by E.A. Sween have tested positive for Listeria monocytogenes. To date, they have not received any reported illnesses related to this organism.

Only the below listed material is affected through Eby Brown.

The material that is affected is listed below:
